FOREWORD

Here's our annual! Yes, it's been work, but it's been fun too. It was a labor of love, and we've enjoyed every minute -- well, almost every minute -- of it. If we have succeeded in capturing a bit of the spirit of Wentworth High School and perpetuating it; if we have presented a reasonably true-to-life picture of our school and its activities; if we have shown in a small way our love for our school, our teachers, and one another --- if we have done these, we have accomplished our purpose in making the book and every minute we spent on it has been worthwhile.

CLASS POEM

SCHOOL LIFE VOYAGE

A little ship set sail one day,
On a cruise for eleven years through life;
All the seamen aboard were carefree and gay,
And ready to battle with storm and strife.

We cruised along for seven years,
Not knowing what was ahead in life.
Then we entered high school without a fear
With our hearts happy and free from strife.

Then came the first three years of high,
They slipped by very fast;
We all knew we were very high,
To the end, and our school days would be past.

The last year came with thirty-four aboard,
Everyone happy and our colors high.
The blue and white could well afford,
To say a cheerful good-bye.

Now our school life together has come to an end,
And each one must go in his own direction
To face life with heads high or bent,
And to finish life without each other's connection.

Miss Maude Reynolds - Teacher

A dense collage of numerous black and white photographs from the 1940s, depicting students in various school settings. The photos show students in classrooms, at desks, in groups, and in individual portraits, capturing everyday school life. The images are arranged in an overlapping, non-linear fashion, creating a rich visual tapestry of student experiences. Notable scenes include students working at desks, posing in groups, and individual portraits of students in formal or semi-formal attire. The overall tone is nostalgic and documentary, providing a glimpse into mid-20th-century education.

"Moonshine and Honeysuckle"

SCENE

The Betts Cabin, somewhere in the mountains of western North Carolina.

Act I—Sunset on a June day.

Act II, Scene I—Morning. A week later.

Act II, Scene 2—Morning. Two weeks later.

Act III—Two days later.

"Moonshine And Honeysuckle" is a play of characters, dealing with the lives, loves, and feuds of the backwoods mountain people of western North Carolina. Homespun philosophy, comedy, and romance fill the story of Clem Betts who strives to bring harmony into the hostile hills near old Lonesome Mountain.

Lula Vollmer, the author, began her career as a playwright at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, where the Play Makers have become famous for developing the Carolina folk-play.

(Produced by Special Arrangement with Samuel French of New York)
